Braddon Farm

Mr. and Mrs. Humphrey Braddon bought 100 acres of land at Coynes Corners in the spring of 1861. When two of their sons married, George and William, the land was divided each being given 50 acres. Humphrey Braddon and his wife continued to live on the farm until their deaths in 1902 and 1914 respectively.

George Braddon worked the 50 acres until his son, Bert, was able to take over the farm. When Bert's son Raymond was of age he worked with his father, the farm being somewhat larger as adjoining land had been purchased over the years. Bert Braddon lived on the farm until his death in 1968. His son, Raymond, continues to live on this farm. Hence this farm has been handed down from father to son for four generations.

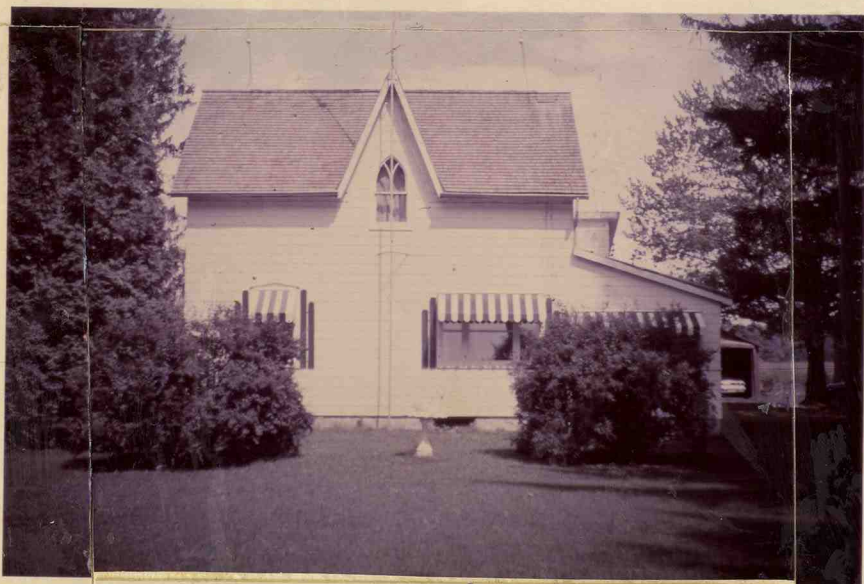

The other 50 acres given to William Braddon was passed on to his son Ernest and then was bought by Humphrey Braddon's great granddaughter and her husband who are the present owners. Therefore the original 100 acres are still in the possession of the direct descendants of Humphrey Braddon.
